About
Las Pinas City

Las Piñas, officially the City of Las Piñas is a 1st class highly urbanized city in Metropolitan Manila, Philippines. According to the 2015 census, it has a population of 588,894 people. Las Piñas was one of the earliest fishing settlements on the shores of Manila Bay. Las Piñas is famous for its Bamboo Organ, which was built by Fr. Diego Cera and completed in 1824. In 1880, the city experienced an outbreak of cholera and smallpox leading to the loss of many lives. Years later, Las Piñas also became a central battleground between Spanish and Philippine forces during the Philippine Revolution.
